

Technology Review Article on Employee Blogging

Posted At : March 15, 2005 8:24 AM | Posted By : Steven Erat

Related Categories: Personal, Blogging, Computer Technology, Macromedia

The current edition of M.I.T.'s Technology Review magazine accolades employee blogging by highlighting the PR value to corporations that permit this activity. Read about it here. The print magazine has a supplementary article that extends this web article a bit.

TalkingTree itself is not hosted on the markme.com website which hosts many Macromedia employee blogs. This is partly because I like to have full control over the website itself, and I like to have a great deal of personal or non-technology blogs intermixed. The Google AdSense revenue covers hosting costs and then some, so there's really no expense in maintaining my blog individually. See the Credits on the sidebar for a link to my hosting provider in case you're shopping around.